

This purpose of the bulletin is to provide updated and corrected information regarding the licensing requirements for community college employees who drive 14 passenger vehicles, originally published in a bulletin released in December 2015. Upon further communication with representatives from the California Highway Patrol Commercial Vehicle Section Administration and the Valley Division Commercial Unit, Commercial Education Program officer, we discovered errors in some published information in the Commercial Driver Handbook, as well as identified more clarifying information on the definition of a profit organization and for compensation.

Many community colleges lease, rent or purchase high occupancy vehicles (i.e. vans) to transport students. The main question in regards to high occupancy vehicles is whether the operation of a vehicle
